Story of an Accidental Invention

The Microwave

Inventor: Percy Spencer Year: 1946

What Happened: With the end of World War II, the Raytheon engineer was looking for other uses for the magnetron, which generated the microwaves for radar systems.

While Spencer was standing next to the device one day, a chocolate bar in his pocket melted.

Big Discovery: The magnetron worked even better on popcorn.

As a Result: Orville Redenbacher became very rich.

"MITOCW and a Chocobar"

When I came to stay in hostel of SKCT two years back I used to walk around. I visited the library on my 2nd day. I can hear many people sighing with annoyance right now (library is cringe worthy to many) .When I entered, it was a miracle for me. It has a very different look compared with a traditional library. I know many of us spend hours browsing in the digital library. It is a great facility available in our college and seriously we are grateful that we have MITOCW. To those who do know what that means: it's an open resource of all MIT's assignments, video lectures, textbooks and whatnot. This will help us to go beyond even the IIT standards and enter an Ivy League level of knowledge sitting before a chair. There is a sad thing I want to mention here, the library users in our college is very very low. Numerous resources that you can't phantom are there in that building I would say it can change you. I would request you to go there and check out the digital resources. There is diversity from Game thrones to Harry Potter to Journals. If you want more all you have to do is ask.

PS: Anyway for people who couldn't care less there is Cafe Coffee Day in main block, which has the greatest Chocobar ever for just ₹10. I have been regular consumer of it daily for 2 years. It's just you know..... Awesome. Did i mention that it's really great? It's the best thing ever!
